I am glad to know that International Organization for Educational Development (IOED) has decided to bring out a souvenir to celebrate its 6th anniversary in a befitting manner. It's equally heartening that IOED has been granted UN's Special consultative Status by the United States.

I extend my heartiest congratulations to all the office bearers and the members of IOED not only because of the 6th anniversary, but also for receiving UN's Special consultative Status as it will encourage them to work with added zeal and dedication to strengthen and improve the United Nation's objectives.

I hope the organization will continue to run its various educational and skill development programmes to create global cadre for skilled workforce to meet global demand of skilled workers. Also, souvenir being brought out on this occasion would go a long way in apprising its readers about the achievements and activities as well as services being rendered by the organization.

My best wishes.
